DIXONITES IN TRIBUTES TO DEAD HEROES

Perfect Weather and Excellent Program Memorial Day

Citizens of Dixon and community yesterday paid tribute to the soldier and sailor heroes who have laid down their lives in American wars. The day was a beautiful one and the attendance at the Memorial Day exercises was the largest in years. The program as arranged by the Dixon Memorial Association officers was carried out to the letter. In the forenoon a salute to the dead heroes was fired from Haymarket Square and at 1 o'clock in afternoon the memorial parade was started with the parade through the business section of the city to Oakwood cemetery and returning to the east side of the court house for the program.

Hon. Vincent A. Bell, prominent attorney of Fulton, and Republican nominee for State's Attorney was the speaker of the afternoon and was introduced by Mayor Frank D. Palmer. His address was typically adapted to the occasion and was delivered in a masterly manner, as follows:

Today, throughout most of the sovereign states of our land, from the Golden Gate to the Atlantic, a grateful people have paused in their daily rush, and with heads bowed in memory and silent tribute, they pay homage where homage is justly due and acknowledge and give recognition to the various acts and deeds of a band of immortals who gave their all, willingly and unflinchingly, that America might be sustained.

It is Memorial Day in the United States—a day set apart by states of the Union to revere and honor the memory of those heroes and martyrs who went West, carrying on to the last—fighting for a flag, a country and a just cause.

Memorial Day came as an aftermath of the Civil War. It arose out of a custom in the South of strewing flowers on the graves of soldiers who fell during the War of the Rebellion; first on the graves of Confederates and then on the graves of both Confederate and Union soldiers. At the news of this impartial offering a thrill of tenderness ran through the North, but there was not any general observance of this beautiful custom, until May, 1868, when General John A. Logan, Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued an order fixing May 30th as the day for strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country, etc. It was the hope of General Logan that the observance be kept up from year to year, and it has been. The state legislatures took up the idea, and now the day is a legal holiday throughout the whole North. While the South has no general Memorial Day, yet the custom is observed in every southern state at some or summer of the year. The custom met

Polo Woman Suicided by Hanging

MRS. JOHN SWIFT IS FOUND DEAD TUESDAY NIGHT

Ill-Health is Thought Cause of Suicide of Sick Woman

(Telegraph Special Service.)
Polo, May 31.—Despondency over ill health is believed to have been the motive for the tragic death of Mrs. John Swift of this city, who suicided by hanging herself in the home of her birth probably early Tuesday afternoon. Her husband discovered her lifeless body hanging by a clothesline in the stairway at their home Tuesday night about 9 o'clock. Dr. J. C. Atkins of Forreston conducted an inquest Tuesday evening, the jury finding that death was due to suicide by hanging.

When Mr. Swift came home to his noon lunch Tuesday his wife appeared in her usual spirits. Returning in the evening, he missed her, but believed that she might have taken an automobile ride with neighbors. Later in the evening when he started for her room on the second floor, he made the gruesome discovery. Neighbors who had called at the Swift home during the afternoon had found the doors locked and it is believed that she may have committed the act shortly after the noon hour, as the condition of the body indicated.

Mrs. Nattie Wolfe was born in Polo, November 9, 1865 in the house where she took her life. Besides her husband she is survived by one son, Morton of Chicago, three sisters, Mrs. Harriet Richards, Mrs. Jennie Brubaker, Mrs. Ella Cummings, all of Los Angeles, Cal., and one brother, Charles of Chicago. She was united in marriage to John Swift 40 years ago last August at Polo. She had been in failing health for the past six years during which time she had submitted to two operations. Funeral services will be held from the late home Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Frank Hancock, pastor of the Methodist church of which she had been a life long member officiating, and with interment in Fairmount cemetery.

Mrs. Myrtle Lough Died Wednesday P. M.

Mrs. Myrtle Lough passed away at the Dixon public hospital yesterday afternoon a few minutes after 2 o'clock. She had been in a critical condition for some time. The deceased was born, October 25, 1886 at Fairmount, Minn., and was united in marriage to Ira Lough of this city, March 15, 1924. Beside her husband, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Nettie Boulton of Elgin, Ill., two sisters, Mrs. Alice Ford and Mrs. Maud Carl-son of Elgin, three brothers, Frank and Charles Reeves of Elgin and Edgar Reeves of Escanaba, Mich. One brother, James, preceded her in death, May 13. Funeral services will be conducted from the residence, 411 South Galena avenue Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in Oakwood.

Transient Killed by Train at Sterling

A man, believed to have been Jack Mayen, aged about 25, of Newark, N. J., was fatally injured when he attempted to alight from an empty coal car in an eastbound North-Western freight train, on which he was stealing a ride, at the Sterling station Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Witnesses said the man, after getting his feet onto the ground, failed to let go of the handbars at the side of the car and was thrown under the wheels. He died on the way to the hospital. His right leg and right arm were badly mangled, his head was severely cut and it is believed his back was broken.

SECOND SHIP TO HUNT 'ITALIA'

NOTHING HEARD FROM NOBILE'S ILL-FATED SHIP

More Planes and Dog Teams Enroute to Kings Bay Now

Oslo, Norway, May 31.—(AP)—With the sealer Hobby steaming north with the first expedition to seek the missing dirigible Italia by air, another vessel was being made ready today to carry other airplanes into the north.

The Norwegian government took over the steamer Ingefour, which is ordinarily engaged in the coal trade at Spitzbergen, to transport one or two navy airplanes. It is expected she will leave tomorrow for Spitzbergen.

The planes will be piloted by Captain Riser-Larsen, who is in charge of rescue plans, and Lieutenant Leif Dietrichson, both of whom accompanied Roald Amundsen on his Polar expedition in 1925. Lieut. Luetzow Holm, following plans drawn up by Captain Riser-Larsen and the Ministry of Defense, will explore the northern section of Spitzbergen by plane. He is now aboard the sealer Hobby with his airplane, en route to Spitzbergen.

The Hobby will stop at Advent Bay and take aboard ten dogs, a slide and supplies and two men, the leader named Tanberg and a hunter named Noels. The Hobby will join the Citta Di Milano, which returned to Kings Bay after encountering strong winds, severe cold and impassable ice floes in an attempt to search for the Italia. The Hobby and Citta Di Milano will go north together and attempt to put the dog team and some men ashore to seek traces of the Italia to the east.

PRESIDENT PICKS WISCONSIN SITE FOR SUMMER REST

Lodge Near the Canadian Border Will be White House

Washington, May 31.—(AP)—President Coolidge has selected a summer White House on the Brule river, 39 miles from Superior, Wisconsin. Mr. Coolidge accepted the offer of Henry Clay Pierce to occupy "Cedar Island Lodge", situated about six miles from Brule. The summer White House will be about 12 hours from Chicago.

In all likelihood the White House executive offices will be established in Superior, while the lodge will constitute merely the residence.

President Coolidge as yet has not decided the exact date of his departure, but it was said today that he would leave Washington as soon as possible after June 11 when he is scheduled to deliver the budget speech here.

The estate surrounding the summer White House comprises several thousand acres mostly wooded but the actual living quarters of the President will be situated on a small island little more than an acre in area reached from the mainland by a narrow footbridge.

The living quarters on the island consist of a one story bungalow of white birch bark and comprising eight bedrooms. The dining room, kitchen and servants' quarters are in a corresponding bungalow on the mainland at the opposite end of the footbridge.

TOLEDO YOUTH ADMITS BRUTAL CRIME ON GIRL Held to Grand Jury for Death of Seven-Year-Old

Toledo, O., May 31.—(AP)—Charles J. Hoppe, 26, confessed kidnaper and slayer of 7-year-old Dorothy Sielagowski, pleaded not guilty to a charge of first degree murder when arraigned before Judge Homer Ramsey in Municipal Court this morning.

The prisoner waived preliminary examination and was held to the county grand jury without bond.

The court room was taxed with the greatest crowd of spectators it ever held. As a precautionary measure special details of police were stationed around the building.

Hoppe's confession came late yesterday after questioning that began with his arrest Tuesday night. Police said he admitted that while under the influence of liquor he obtained at a wedding celebration, he drove to the Sielagowski home, forced an entrance, kidnapped Dorothy from her bed and strangled her to death after a criminal attack.

Hoppe was suspected because he had roomed at the Sielagowski home. A cast of his teeth fitted exactly with impressions in the flesh of the dead girl, and yesterday police found buried in his backyard the blood-stained dark suit which he wore at the time the crime was committed.

ARMY AERONAUTS VICTORS IN RACE FATAL TO COUPLE

Disastrous Storm at the Beginning of Race Hits Gas Bags

Pittsburgh, May 31.—(AP)—The national elimination balloon race, broken up soon after the start by a disastrous storm that killed two of the balloonists, today was at an end with the Army No. 1 from Scott, Field, Belleville, Ill., the only bag to travel more than a few miles from the starting field.

The Army No. 1 came to rest at Weems, Va., at 6:10 o'clock this morning, race headquarters here were advised in a telegram from the pilot, Capt. E. W. E. Kepner.

Captain Kepner's brief telegram to the race officials made no mention of the storm that left in its wake last night two dead and several injured balloonists and thirteen destroyed or disabled balloons. Kepner and his aide, W. O. Eareskon were the only contestants to pass out of the storm center within a few miles of Bettis Field here, where the bags took off late yesterday.

Delay Announcement
The Army balloon apparently had won the race and the right to enter the international derby next month. Race officials said, however, that the winner would not be announced until all of the flights had been considered.

The race brought death to Lieut. Paul Evert, pilot of Army No. 3 of Langley Field, Va., and Walter Morton of Akron, O., aide to Ward T. Van Orman, also of Akron, when the Army No. 3 and Van Orman's balloon, the Goodyear V, fell victims, along with eleven other bags, or lightning bolts and a wind storm over the adjoining counties of Fayette and Westmoreland.

Twenty-four balloonists, some of them hurt by falls from the clouds or by lightning, today were in and near Pittsburgh relating experiences in a storm such as veteran balloonists said had not been encountered in eighteen years of national balloon competition.

TWO MET DEATH
Pittsburgh, May 31.—(AP)—Two balloonists were killed by lightning in the national elimination race yesterday. Several others were injured. All but one of the fourteen start-

HONOLULU IS INITIAL STOP OF BIG PLANE

Southern Cross Takes Air at Oakland, Cal. Early This Morn

Oakland, Cal., May 31.—(AP)—The monoplane Southern Cross hopped off from the municipal airport here at 8:51 A. M., today on a 2,400 mile non-stop flight to Honolulu.

The big ship bounced and careened down the runway at the take-off, picking up speed every second until 4,000 feet from the start, Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, flight commander, gave it the stick and it rose about a foot from the ground.

The speed however, was not sufficient and the plane settled back to the runway. More gasoline was fed to the motors and attaining a speed of 75 miles an hour the plane soared into the air near the end of the mile and quarter track.

Once in the air, it rose steadily over the housetops. It reached an altitude of about 100 feet over the city and continued to rise as the pilot headed for San Francisco Bay and flew out over the water toward the golden gate.

Four Men Aboard
The flyers, two Australians and two Americans, were awakened at their hotel quarters at 6 A. M. and left at once for the Oakland airport, where mechanics busied themselves with warming up the three motors of their monoplane, the Southern Cross.

With Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith, pilot and flight commander was at the controls. Captain Charles Ulm will be co-pilot, James Warner, radio operator and Lieutenant Harry Lyon, navigator. Kingsford-Smith and Ulm are Australians and Warner and Lyon are American aviators.

Spanish Plane Cause of Worries

Seville, Spain, May 31.—(AP)—Belief that the Spanish fliers Ognacio Inglesias and Francisco Jimenez, who hopped off from Seville at noon Tuesday to break the world's distance flight record, might have started across the Atlantic for Havana, was dispelled today by receipt of a radio message saying the Spanish plane was about 800 miles from Karachi, India, last night.

Announcement of receipt of the message was made today at the Tablada air field near Seville. The message, stating that the plane was proceeding to its destination, was sent by an unnamed English boat to which the pilots of the "Jesus del Gran Poder" had dropped a note contained in a metal tube in which they said all was well aboard the plane.

The previous absence of news from the plane had led to some belief that the aviators had turned toward the Atlantic.

Lone Eagle Lost When Beacons Fail

Los Angeles, May 31.—(AP)—A dispatch from Long Beach, Cal., to the Times here today says Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, who caused his friends some anxiety when he was reported overdue on a flight from Grand Canyon, Arizona, was lost and cruised for nearly two hours above the hills surrounding the Standard Oil Company beacon near Merced, Cal.

The dispatch says that the famous pilot, finally seeing the beacon, made an unsuccessful attempt to land at Merced. He did not land in Los Angeles, it was learned, because none of the airports here displayed the beacon he expected to find.

That he was able to land at Long Beach shortly afterward was due to the thoughtfulness of the police there who heard the roar of the motor and

GLORIOUS NEW HEALTH GIVEN HER BY GLY-CAS

Food No Nourishment Before, Awful Headaches and Dizziness.

Surprising things have been accomplished by this amazing new medical discovery, Gly-Cas, in every city and town in which it has been introduced and now, well-known Dixon men and women, in large numbers are taking this new vegetable preparation and reporting astonishing relief in many cases. For instance, just a few days ago, Mrs. Martin Cox, respected Dixon lady, living at 614 Van Buren Ave., said to the Gly-Cas Man:

"I have found your Gly-Cas the most remarkable stomach remedy I have ever used. For years my stomach had given me no end of trouble, and worst of all, nothing I used seemed to do me any good. Foods that I ate gave me apparently no nourishment and this continued trouble with my stomach consequently resulted in poor health for me. There would be weeks that I had terrible headaches every day and I was subjected to dizzy spells. My back was a continual source of pain to me."

"I tell you, I had suffered so much and had tried most everything without relief and I really just thought I would never see a well day. This was before my friends who had used Gly-Cas with surprising results advised me to try it. I am now indeed thankful that I followed their advice about Gly-Cas. From the very beginning, Gly-Cas began to benefit me and each week I could see an improvement in my condition. I do not hesitate to recommend Gly-Cas to others now because it has actually eliminated those terrible headaches for me and the dizzy spells, too. The constant pain in my back has been growing less and now, where I once felt all tired and worn out, I feel stronger. Without any doubt whatever this Gly-Cas has done wonders in my case."

The Gly-Cas Man is at the Campbell White Cross drug store, Dixon, and is daily meeting the public and explaining this amazing new medical discovery. Sold by leading druggists in all surrounding towns—Adv.

Terse Items of News Gathered in Dixon During Day

College was founded in 1853 and is one of Methodism's best schools.

CHILDREN SAW PICTURE Wednesday after the parade the children who took part gathered around the Dixon theater and eagerly scanned the pictures at the doors, some of them no doubt remembering that last year arrangements had been made for their entertainment inside. But it seems that this year no such arrangements had been made. They had been of model deportment in the parade and surely deserved a reward. Manager and Mrs. Rorer, noticing the crowd of two hundred or more kiddies, and having a warm spot in their hearts for youngsters, resolved then and there that the reward should be, and without a moment's hesitation threw open the doors of the theater and invited all of them in. And the children were quiet as mice, showing their appreciation in their glowing faces and gleeful applause of the picture.

Sale Going "Big" The O. H. Martin & Co. closing out sale which has been in progress for the past week, has been very successful, exceeding the anticipation of Mr. Martin and his assistants. The sale has offered some wonderful bargains and there are many more to be had. Mr. Martin has always been one of the leading merchants of Dixon, and has carried an up-to-the-minute stock of reliable merchandise in every department. His clerks were taught that courtesy was first in their calendar. Of Mr. Martin it can be said as it used to be when one man wanted to compliment another, "His word is as good as his bond." The sale will continue until the stock is sold.

TO A FLEUR-DE-LIS
Dust are Tyre and Sidon,
Cities of long ago,
Over their ancient splendor
Softly the grasses blow.

And the dew to Tyre's rare purple
Is a secret that bides unguessed.
Hid from our modern wisdom,
Falls to disturb its rest.

Yet never more regal beauty,
Ancient or new, could be
Than nature fashions each springtime
In the folds of a fleur-de-lis.

Library Has Literary and Informative Value

Washington, D. C., May 31.—The rapidly growing library of the General Federation of Women's Clubs which occupies a conspicuous place in the Headquarters in Washington, D. C. isn't just "a library," it is a collection of books that has individuality as well as literary and informative value. Books autographed by the authors constitutes one feature of the collection, but the "library of states" dominates the collection in size. The plan for each of the 14,000 clubs in the General Federation to contribute at least one book, preferably by a state author, has met with remarkable response. A recent compilation of this section of Headquarters library reveals gifts from State Federations and by individual clubs in the states as follows:

New Jersey, 39; Indiana, 38; Maryland, 35; Massachusetts, 33; Iowa, 29; New York, 29; Alabama, 28; Tennessee, 28; Connecticut, 27; Kentucky, 27; Texas, 26; Arizona, 25; California, 25; Maine, 24; Oklahoma, 24; Pennsylvania, 20; West Virginia, 20; Wisconsin, 20; South Carolina, 19; Vermont, 18; Michigan, 17; Virginia, 16; Delaware, 15; Mississippi, 15; New Mexico, 15; South Dakota, 15; North Carolina, 14; North Dakota, 14; Washington, 14; Illinois, 13; Oregon, 13; Rhode Island, 13; Nebraska, 12; Utah, 11; Colorado, 9; Kansas, 9; Idaho, 8; Florida, 6; New Hampshire, 4; Missouri, 3; Wyoming, 3; District of Columbia, 2; Georgia, 2; Ohio, 1.

Since this compilation was made many additional books have been contributed and the revised list of the standing of the several states will be announced at the Biennial Convention of the General Federation to be held in San Antonio, May 28 to June 8.

Recital Tuesday Evening Proved Delightful Event

On Tuesday evening at St. Paul's Lutheran church, a most enjoyable secular and sacred recital was given by the pupils of Mrs. (E. M.) Maude Eames Goodsell, before a very appreciative audience. The church had been beautifully decorated with floral wreaths and with the lovely gowns of those participating in the recital, the scene was a pretty one. Mrs. Goodsell accompanied her pupils. The varied and interesting program as published in the Telegraph on Monday evening was given. Noticeable in all of Mrs. Goodsell's pupils is the excellent poise and graceful demeanor. Many of those taking part have a fine future in music if their performance Tuesday evening may be a criterion. Mrs. Goodsell is splendidly equipped to instruct, be it in the simplest form of singing or in the most difficult role, as her program shows, and she herself possesses a voice of rare sweetness and power. Both the students taking part in the program and Mrs. Goodsell are to be congratulated on the success which the recital Tuesday evening proved to be.

Garrison School Closed Friday

On Friday May 25th, the Garrison School closed after a successful year with Vivian G. Lowry as teacher. At the noon hour, the parents of the scholars and neighbors of the community, gathered at the schoolhouse where all enjoyed a bountiful picnic dinner, after which ice cream was served.

Shortly after the dinner, a program was given, which was greatly enjoyed by all. "Waiting for the Train," a play consisting of twelve characters, caused much enjoyment.

Sidney D. Heagy was the honor graduate for the year. Glenn E. Coleman was the only pupil who was neither absent nor tardy during the entire year. Phyllis F. Carson deserves honorable mention for her good record of attendance. Miss Lowry has been engaged to teach for another year.

Miss Gay Bride Of Kenneth Thomson

Los Angeles, May 31.—(AP)—The marriage here Tuesday night of Kenneth Thomson, leading man of the stage and screen, and Miss Aiden Gay, known to theater goers of both New York and London, was disclosed to friends of the couple today.

The couple filed notice of intentions to marry last week but kept the wedding date secret. Miss Gay became the center of an international stage controversy when British authorities refused her the right to play in "Married Bachelors" in London on the ground that she was depriving an English actress of employment.

READER CHIFFON PRINTS SUMMER EVENING STYLE

Paris.—(AP)—At some of the fashion houses whose wealthy clients consider price of small importance, printed chiffon evening dresses have been the flowered patterns picked out in style. Worth is a leader in this. Sometimes the heading is done in contrasting color as Chinese red on gray or beige, black on gray or dark blue on beige. Worth also uses many bead tassels and fringes.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUGGER

Her Royal Highness, the Princess Julianna of Holland, as only child of Queen Wilhelmina, and so a future Queen, is attending Leyden University in preparation for her queen job. She is specializing in law, is liked by her classmates, and takes part in all school activities even writing the class song.

She lives with three classmates in a villa outside of Leyden, going back to the palace in the Hague for weekends only. Only one of the three chums who live with her, is of court circles, we are told. The second is the daughter of a merchant, and the third of a French priest.

Queen Wilhelmina's daughter's methods sound sane enough to be copied by humbler mothers. Julianna sounds like a promising potential queen.

"WE WANT WHITE COLLARS!"

My friend, the woman next door, confided the other day her version of just why stay-at-home wives envy the working girl in store or school-room or office. "You can talk till you're blue in the face of how teachers and typists and writers and lawyers work harder than housekeepers whose time is their own and who can sit down for a breathing spell whenever they want to, but the fact remains that housework is dirty, messy, old-clothes work, and any woman envies another woman's job which can be done in nice clothes. White collar jobs are what we stay-at-homes are after."

And that's that and seems logical enough!

DISHWASHING FOR WRITERS

The young ladies of the June graduating classes who are beginning to wonder "after school, what?" and write in asking how to be authors, may be astounded to learn that dishwashing comes in handy for an author, as demonstrated by at least two of the spring author list.

Helen Woodbury, author of "Uncertain Treasure," washed dishes when out of college in order to do some newspaper feature articles on New York's working girls. And Blanche Coozer, author of "Smiley's Haven," who helped put herself through college by washing dishes, says that this experience was invaluable in novel writing.

Funny, isn't it, how much easier dishwashing is when one is doing it for some reason other than mere dishwashing?

"Why Mothers Should Send Their Girls To the 'Y' Camp"

By Florence M. Yohn

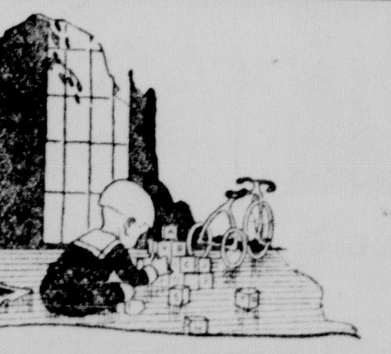

The first thing to do in building one's program for camp is to know for whom—their age—their home-life—their ideals—their training and what they like to do—and their dislikes.

The camp program must fit the needs of the thirteen year old girl and the fifteen and seventeen year old girl. Because of the full program of activities provided by the parents there is often little time left for "free play time," many girls confine their social activities within a selected group. This truly is not a natural building for democracy.

Each must have an opportunity to enjoy "simple fun." Some girls are starving for the chance to be "herself," in a natural environment and she is awaiting a chance to prove herself. She does not necessarily want to prove herself the best basketball player—the best swimmer—but to prove she is "one of the group" who enjoys those interests.

Mothers should be concerned about the "spare time" of their girl. Regardless of age she needs to be busy. Just taking a walk about the streets may be alright as far as the walking goes but if one is a little observing they will note that there is something besides the walk involved. The girl just "hangs" around—she does not know what to do. She "hangs" around for the want of something to do. Some times our suggestions seem "kidish," uninteresting—she has not had the experience of belonging to a real group and we must give it to her.

Camp-life is an ideal experience for any girl. The surroundings—the living—the training—the friendliness that abounds in such environment cannot help but enrich the life of any girl. She cannot help but grow and receive a "vision" of much that is come to her through such a good wholesome experience.

The terms of "output" and "intake" are often used as standard measurements. We may give a girl music—French—art—all these tend to develop the finer senses. But too much "intake" is not a wholesome situation. Camp gives girls opportunities to use their creative powers—it may be just a song sung around the campfire—it may be that through her French lessons she has a knowledge of the dress of the French woman. If so, she can on "International Day" add much atmosphere and realism.

Some girls would rather not do the "individual" act. Camp furnishes her a group in which she may enjoy "group activities." Some girls need "to get away from the admiration motive" in doing things. Everyone knows that a "competitive spirit" is very important in the progress of success. This is watched very carefully and a "healthy rivalry" is part of the Camp training.

The "Y" Camp for girls has a program which will give each girl an opportunity to try her "growing powers"—to train her in self-control and poise—to try her skill in activities. A girl has many chances to prove her loyalty to the best things—to develop in fair play and prove herself a worthwhile friend.

To be out-of-doors and with a program which places a girl on the "Road to Somewhere," is the finest thing a mother can do for her daughter. Each mother knows of the many idle minutes vacation time brings. Each mother should provide her daughter with this opportunity for a "real good time."

The list for each "Y" Camp period is nearly complete so those interested who have not conferred with Mrs. Yohn are urged to do so within the next week. All desiring information regarding dates, cost and etc., may get same by calling the "Y".

TWO AUTHORS TELL TRUE STORIES OF STRANGE ANIMALS

By Mary Graham Bonner
Author of "The Magic Map," etc. For NEA Service

William Lovell Finley and Irene Finley have told the true stories of their unusual animal companions in "Wild Animal Pets," which is illustrated by many appealing photographs. Mr. Finley is well known for his long experience as State biologist and game warden of Oregon. Some of the pets whose stories here are bears, panthers, a porcupine, a coat mundi, a coyote, a California quail, a wood pussy, a California condor and others not generally accented to companionship.

I like this book for many reasons. First of all, there is no nature faking. Again it is interestingly written, and it inculcates into a young person that the creatures of the animal world can be so much more entertaining when studied and known than when silenced by slaughter. The authors quote Stephen Haweis:

"Children brought up with pets do not grow up into criminals."

A porcupine seems a forbidding pet in the way in which he raises his quills, but that as the authors say is what they know "instinctively" is the correct porcupine way of meeting strangers. This porcupine liked to have his back rubbed. "Of course he was safe in knowing that no one would rub it the wrong way."

And of course the authors do their part toward pointing out the entirely incorrect gossip that is believed in much the same idle, groundless way as is gossip that a porcupine throws his quills. This is what he really can do.

"The quills are fastened to the body just as hair is. If they penetrate the skin or clothing even lightly, these barbs catch, and the quills easily pull out of the porcupine's hide."

A porcupine's voice in the depth of quiet woods is one of the most beautiful sounds in the world. This story brought back to me an early play of my part. But I've not meant to dwell on this story exclusively. The book is fascinating throughout. I recommend it to every one interested in animal life.

Corner Stone Honors American Heroines

Washington, May 31.—(AP)—President Coolidge, who yesterday pleaded for the abolishment of war as the fittest tribute to the war dead of the nation late today, as president of the American Red Cross, will lay the corner stone of the organization's building dedicated to the sacrifices and the services of American women in the World War.

Chief Justice Taft will preside at the ceremonies and the memorial will be accepted for the nation by Secretary of War Davis.

In his speech at the Gettysburg battlefield yesterday the President urged less indifference to crime, condemned what was described as tendency of legislatures to exceed authority granted them by the Constitution and declared that although greater sums are being spent for the maintenance of American military establishments, they were "exceedingly moderate" and purely defensive in character.

Referring to efforts to negotiate treaties to renounce war the President said:

"It is my earnest hope that success may crown the negotiations now in progress, and that the ideals which have inspired the French Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Secretary of State of the United States in their joint efforts to find a solution of the problem of peace may find a practical realization in the early making of a multilateral treaty limiting future resort to war."

Short Interviews With Famous Women

By NEA Service
It's never too late to change your career, according to Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche, mother of two sons and a best seller.

"When I gave up the stage for matrimony, I thought I was through with careers," Mrs. Roche admitted. "I expected to be just the wife of Mr. Roche, the novelist, and nothing else. But after I had listened to my husband's advice to young authors for four or five years, I decided to take a crack at the literary art myself, in spite of my alleged domestic chains. Steady, daily work turned the trick. With my first novel off my mind, I'm now at work on number two."

"Any housewife can write a book. All you have to do is sit down and write. Put two men and one woman in a room, figure out what they will do. That is a novel. Use two women and one man if you prefer. But stick to the triangular arrangement."

"Set aside a regular period each day for writing down what the chosen characters are doing in that room. Before you know it you will be a novelist. And maybe you'll make so much money you won't have to do the housework."

DEFEAT AUTOMATIC APPORTIONMENT.

Various reasons are given for failure of the Fenn reapportionment bill in the lower house of congress, but the main objection by congressmen is the fact that it delegates to the department of commerce the power to make the reapportionment in the event it passed by the first congress after the next census. Further objection is that it seeks to bind a future congress.

This bill does not make provision for reapportionment on the basis of the last census. It anticipates the census of 1930. It provides that if congress fails to apportion in its first session after the census, the department of commerce shall make the apportionment on the basis of 435 members, the present membership, and shall certify to each state the number of representatives to which it is entitled.

This measure also was considered objectionable because it undertook to go too far into regulation of procedure of the states.

Congress has omitted only one reapportionment. That was after the census of 1920. The question arose, as it always has arisen in the past, of enlarging the membership of the house of representatives or reducing the membership of several states. In the past the issue, with one exception, has been settled by enlarging the representation of the states showing sufficient growth and leaving others with the same membership, reducing none.

With the house membership at 435, another increase seemed objectionable and the matter dragged without being forced to an issue. Post-war legislation occupied attention and the matter of reapportionment dropped out of sight. When the failure of congress to act had been brought forcibly to public view the decade was half gone. The coming census was as near as the one last past. The disposition of congress was to wait and reapportion upon the basis of the 1930 census.

The matter has been discussed sufficiently to cause congress to act with reasonable promptness after the next census, in our opinion, without delegating the power to any other government agency.

No such issue is involved in the national congress to prevent reapportionment as exists in the Illinois legislature, where an effort is being made to limit Chicago. The United States congress only was confronted with the unpleasant task of voting several congressmen out of existence. The states so affected could not be expected to push the matter and others were inclined to procrastinate in tacking an unpleasant job. After the next census there probably will have been enough agitation to bring results without delay.

BRING HER OVER, PROF.

A London professor has a talking flea. We suggest that he get into communication with the Boston lady who owns the talking dog. Then we'll find out what a flea and a dog have to say to one another. . . . Both the loquacious flea and the oratorical dog happen to be ladies. Just like a lady flea and a lady dog to learn to talk first! . . . We are wondering if the talking flea can tell, blind-folded, whether she likes Airedales or Water Spaniels best as companions. . . . Or whether or not she would walk a mile to bite a member of the House of David. . . . Or how she maintains that school-girl complexion. . . . If the advertising writers don't get to that talking flea some way, it'll be just too bad.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

The stone path led 'way up a hill. The Tynimites soon got their fill of walking, and wee Clowny said, "Say, how far must we go? I am as tired as I can be. I'm getting wobbly at the knee. It really would be easier, if we would travel slow." "My, my," exclaimed the Happy Man, "I walk as slowly as I can. Brace up, and keep on plugging. We will very soon be there. I think you all should realize that walking is an exercise. Why, if I had to walk ten miles a day I wouldn't care."

However, he slowed down a bit, and soon the bunch were feeling fit. "Ah, look ahead," cried Scouty, "that's your little home, I'll bet." "You're right, it is," the man replied, "and we will shortly be inside. And there we'll find a lot of things that you are going to get."

"The house was quite a funny sight. It didn't seem to stand up right. It looks like it is going to fall," said Carpy, with a grin. "Oh, it's as safe as it can be," the man replied. "You'll shortly see." And, as he opened up the door, the Tynimites walked right in.

Right on a table, piled up neat, the bunch saw lots of things to eat. A lot of cans of real nice fruit, and heaps of crackers, too. The Happy Man said, "Here's a bag that one of you will have to drag. I'm going to put these things inside, and give them all to you."

"Oh, thank you! Thank you!" Coppy said. And then the fat man went ahead and filled the burlap sack up full. "How great!" wee Coppy roared. Then Clowny grabbed the bulging sack and swung it upon his back. They helped him to take it to their boat, where it was put on board.

My dear Marye:

You are a constant surprise to me, Marye; sometimes you talk and act exactly like a child, and then again you come out with mature ideas that sound as if you actually used your pretty head for thinking purposes.

I don't think you missed romance in your girlhood—I think you had a very pleasant and happy life. You associated with boys and girls of your own type and your own environment.

Perhaps you did not receive many sonnets, but you always went to all the dances and parties and you were always escorted by a respectable young man who respected you, and I seem to remember that you hungered less for poetry and romance than you did for jazz and excitement.

You seem to assume, just because Alan is a business man, who goes every day to his office, and works hard to support you, that he has no desire or no appreciation of the more aesthetic pleasures of life.

I am sure you do him an injustice. Perhaps he does not have the time you do, to think about himself, and to wonder just what he is missing, but I cannot feel that there is the gulf between your minds that you insist.

You are really too smart a girl, Marye, to have so much time on your hands, and to be obliged to make so little effort. I wish you would forget about Pede, studio parties, romantic memories, and give more of your time and attention to Alan. You two must not grow apart.

Try to be just as charming and as interested in romance with him

The committee was directed to report its findings not later than January 1, 1929.

Six Convicts to Die for Prisoner's Death

Sacramento, Cal., May 29—(AP)—Six convicts charged with the murder of George Baker, a fellow prisoner, during the Thanksgiving Day riots at Folsom prison, late last night were found guilty, the verdict carrying the death penalty for all.

Several prisoners and guards were killed during the attempt of convicts to lead a prison break from Folsom last November. The riot leaders were found to be Tony Brown, San Francisco bandit; Walter E. Burke, Roy E. Stokes, James Gregg, James Gleason and Albert M. Stewart.

Stewart was called a "squealer" last February by his fellow convicts when the same six were convicted of the murder of Guard Ray Singleton and sentenced to life imprisonment.

The convicts were reindicted and brought to trial. Stewart turned state's evidence and it was expected that he would be granted life imprisonment. When he was convicted of first degree murder along with the five others, they broke into sardonic laughter.

with such gorgeous, heartfelt response that now it includes veterans of all wars.

From the beginning of time almost, peoples and nations have engaged themselves in the carnage of warfare and it may nearly be said that wars have been the rule and peace the exception. There have been wars of conquest, aggrandizement, revolutionary and civil, since before the rise of the Roman Empire to the present day. Even now we read of Civil Wars and conquests among some of our European neighbors. Will it ever end? Will we live to see the day of a Universal Peace, a lasting peace that will insure our posterity against the ravages of ruthless neighbors? May it ever be said of our country that it has never failed its manpower against that of any other nation or people except upon just provocation, and in the interest of justice, freedom and democracy.

Wars require armies and armies require men. The men must be recruited from the nation's best, the choice of the land—all go forth to duty but not all return. Some who do return bring back empty sleeves, empty pant legs and some are blind or otherwise incapacitated to such degrees that they are unable to pursue or seek out profitable callings which God Almighty ordained that they should. They are lost. No gratuity, no recognition of government or man can restore to them that which they have given. And yet there has never been one who has so returned who ever voiced one syllable of resentment at his loss or plight. That is characteristic of the soldier, whether in the service of God or Country.

But we, who have known the din of battle, have seen innocent blood spilled and lives sacrificed at the altar of greed and depravity, know only too keenly the awful price of war. Some of us have only a few years back returned from the greatest conflict the world has ever known. The cause or causes of that conflict have been deeply mooted questions. We were taught and believed with a sincere conviction that it was a war of selfish greed, aggrandizement, premeditated and in the hands of its builders for years. From a carefully designed excuse just as carefully carried into execution, a conflagration was started which virtually enveloped the world for over four years.

But if you should seek out any veteran of that or any war and engage him in conversation regarding armed conflict, you would find that the paramount thought in his mind is not war, but peace. Not that peace which results from exhaustion or defeat, a temporary armistice—looking forward to renewed hostilities, but a peace proceeding from the heart as well as the mind—a peace that will endure through the ages. The soldier knows for he has borne the brunt of battle and has tasted of the dregs of humanity. And I say to you that it is the supreme test of man to be a soldier, for the soldier has been baptized in fire.

There has been no man since the beginning of time who has attained high military rank and honor, but who would gladly have bartered it all in exchange for a solution of the problems or differences causing wars. They all believe that the termination of wars from the world program and scheme of life and substituting the pen for the sword is the ideal to which all peoples should attain. The "Pen is mightier than the sword," and when human perseverance has been trained and educated to think and reason in terms of tolerance for the rights of others and be not blindly prejudiced by selfish, sordid desires, involving the element of self only, then will we see an enlightened world turning toward and beseeching the Prince of Peace for help and guidance to direct a world tired of war.

I have a deep, abiding faith in humanity and honestly feel that the time is coming when peace will be the rule and war a rare exception. War spells destruction, famine, waste and the consequent economic unrest. Such was not the scheme outlined for earth; on the contrary it was peace and progress. While it cannot be denied that we have enjoyed unbelievable progress in all things material, yet even that progress has been retarded and diverted by wars. Diverted, in part at least, to inventions for more effective death dealing war machines and munitions. It must be halted in its onward march, for forward it goes. We alone can stop it. Let us, therefore, bend our hearts and our minds to the accomplishment of that task, colossal though it is. Let us dream of the day when shells, cannon, noxious gases and the like are but history to future generations. May we hope that they will never face the grim realities, as we have done!

I do not speak of the Utopian, neither do I drift in idle dreams. We, all of us, are practical enough in our beliefs and assertions to realize that the surest safeguard to peace and unmolested commercial pursuit is to be prepared for war. Unpreparedness in the World War accounted for more lives being taken than any other single factor. The true advocate of peace tempers the theoretical with the practical, and he gauges himself according to the exigencies of the time. By preparedness, it is not meant that armed forces proportionate to war strength are needful of even necessary. Our standing army, guardsmen and the like would be a force to insure domestic tranquility. In the nature of police protection, if you will. Once the peoples of the world have grasped the true idea of and have sincerely granted and given the elements necessary to insure each to his neighbor, "malice toward none, and charity for all," then will we dwell as the Nazarene admonished that we should—as brothers—but not until then.

Then, therefore, is it so impractical, so out of reason to believe that it cannot be accomplished? No. Never in the history of this world, has man failed to do that which he set out to do, when in the doing of it he has set a pace for the world. It is a process of education, a sincere attempt on the part of each individual and nation to convince himself and itself and then their neighbors, that the principle is right and that it is just as practical as a resort to arms.

Much space and time have been given to this subject and many rapid strides have been made toward this end. Through international treaties courts have been established, boards of arbiters named and many disputes which might otherwise have led to arms, have been amicably settled. And nearly all this in our time, since 1918. What brought it about? Legless, armless, blind, crippled and crazed men returned from war; homeless, orphaned children; cities and villages razed to the ground; one time fertile fields pitted with shell holes and strewn with blameless, ghostly dead; overflowing hospitals and an overly burdensome taxation levied as further er tribute to the God of War.

It has been said of the modern systems of government that too much power is lodged in the hands of a few. That the right and prerogative of finality of decision in matters of war are not rightly entrusted. However, that may be and I do not say, yet the people are to blame for such a condition if it is true. Remember, a government is such only by the consent of the governed and if our system is lacking necessary institutions to give effect to popular demand why not supply them.

Therefore, ladies and gentlemen, and you, especially, my comrades, let us keep the faith, and today as we gather to keep our rendezvous with death and pay respect and tribute to our comrades still in death, let us not be unmindful of the admonition so wonderfully and truly expressed in that beautiful poem, "In Flanders Field": "If ye break faith with us who die We shall not sleep."

MANY BRITISH TOURISTS TAKE TO MOTOR BOATS

Portsmouth, England—(AP)—The increase in numbers of motor cars on the roadways of England has led to many British business men to take up motor-boating.

The cost of a boat with quarters for six people and a speed of eight miles an hour is $3,000, and the cost of running it about $250 a year, which includes $60 for housing and mooring, $60 for insurance and $125 for refit.

Many have chosen this method of making trips around the coast of Britain or short journeys across to the continent, and, according to reports from the building yards, many more will be forsaking the dusty highways for waterways this holiday season.

One firm alone has orders in hand for seventy pleasure motor-boats, and other firms, which formerly relied solely on orders from abroad, are busy on boats for British owners.

Now that house cleaning time has arrived you may find articles of furniture you wish to dispose of. A 50c ad in the Dixon Telegraph is bound to bring results.

NEGRO CONTROLS GA. CAMPAIGN IN BEHALF HOOVER

He Tells of Collecting
$2,200 for Work
in His State

Washington, May 31—(AP)—The story of how the negro national committeemen for Georgia successfully fought white domination of his campaign activities in favor of Herbert Hoover was told today by Ben J. Davis, the committeeman.

Testifying before the Senate elections committee, Davis related how the fight between himself and Clark Greer of Washington who, he said, tried to run the campaign, ended with Davis getting $2,200 from Rush L. Holland, former Assistant Attorney General and a Hoover campaign leader.

Davis came to Washington to lay his troubles before Postmaster General New and Perry W. Howard, negro national committeemen from Mississippi. They sent him to Holland who gave him a total of $2,200 of which $200 was for expenses.

The witness, who said he was editor of the Atlanta Independent, first testified he had used the money for campaign expenses, then that he had given it to the treasurer of the state committee and to the committee itself. He corrected his statement that he had not deposited any of the money in banks and said $1,000 had been so deposited.

The fight with Greer started, Davis said, when the white man appeared in Georgia with the announcement he was there to run the Hoover campaign.

Davis refused to work with him and said the campaign did not "get into the hands" of Greer.

Finally questioned by Senator Bratton, Democrat of New Mexico, Davis remembered another $200 a man named Flanders had given him. He spent this without keeping track of where it went. Asked how he had spent the $1,150 collected as expenses from Holland, Watson and Flanders, he said it was to "reimburse myself for trips."

"What was the occasion of spending $3,000 of Hoover money in Georgia?" asked Senator Bratton who had drawn from the witness that there were only three contests in the state. Davis said the $2,000 received from Hoover was used to pay expenses of the delegates to the state convention.

Second Division's Reunion is Opened

St. Louis, May 31—(AP)—On the tenth anniversary of their movement into Belleau Wood in France to stop the Germans, Second Division troops of the A. E. F. were here today for their annual reunion over three days.

The Second Division Association was here for two other purposes aside from the reunion. One was to raise money for a suitable memorial to the 5,000 war dead of the division and the other, the publication of a division history.

Among the dignitaries on the program were Major General John J. Lejeune of the Marines, Major General Preston Brown, Colonel Hanford MacNider, President of the Association and former Assistant Secretary of War, and Major General James G. Harbord.

CUBA USES OLD SPANISH GARROTE FOR EXECUTIONS

Havana—(AP)—The one machine that the Spaniards are credited with having imported into Cuba 134 years ago is still in use.

It is the "garrote," instrument of death, which greatly resembles an old picture of an Inquisition machine of torture. For many years the garrote served the Spaniards, dealing death to Cuban rebels. Since the expulsion of the old world rulers it has been used at the Havana penitentiary as the official instrument of execution.

No place but in Cuba is this garrote used officially in executions. A prisoner operates the beheading device and gets money and whose time is decreased in compensation for his services.

The Havana garrote is said to have taken 184 lives since it has been in Cuban use. Before that it was used in executing Spaniards accused of high treason.

Arlington Park race course, 23 miles from Chicago, in glorious splendor for its second inaugural next Monday, June 4, and its greatest attraction, the American Derby, June 9. The season, ending June 30, promises to be the finest in the history of the western turf. Arlington Park's grandstand three blocks long, has 900 boxes. If its 10,000,000 pounds of steel were converted into a strip one-sixteenth of an inch thick and one inch wide it would reach from New York City to 600 miles beyond Hong Kong, China.

With its purses and stakes, valued at a half million dollars, this titanic grandstand with its 900 ft. graduated terrace, can accommodate, without discomfort, 80,000 persons, all of whom—great or modest—can have an unobstructed view of the entire race course.

NEW TURF QUEEN, WORTH MILLIONS, NOT FOR SOCIETY

Owner of Reigh Count
May Set Record in Stable Earnings

By NEA Service

Chicago—Another "Queen of the American Turf" ranking with Mrs. Payne Whitney and Mrs. Virginia Fair Vanderbilt succeeded to the throne when the pretty little red colt Reigh Count, won the classic Kentucky Derby for Mrs. John Hertz, wife of the multi-millionaire Chicago taxicab magnate.

With the crown goes gold plate, riches, floral wreaths, social distinction and a high place in elite society that has turned in these new days to sports as another means of feminine expression.

But to Mrs. Hertz the possession of Reigh Count, the Derby winner and Anita Peabody, the champion filly of the age represents only the means of gratifying a great love for horses and a keen desire for competition in a most fascinating game.

If Mrs. Hertz had a fair for society her place would be fixed. As the new queen of the American track, her position, if she should so desire it, would rate her the most prominent box in the fashionable tiers and Belmont Park and other aristocratic tracks where positions in the "Old Four Hundred" are not qualifications for the best seats.

Not Socially Inclined

But Mrs. Hertz is not socially inclined. Her youthful appearance does not indicate it but she is a grandmother and her interests are far removed from society.

"I never have cared for society and I did not get into the racing game for any social ends," she said a few days ago. "My husband and I and our children have always been interested in horses and I am not boasting when I say that I can ride quite well and that I know a little about playing polo."

There is a sort of financial thrill to the game, of course. But the pleasure we have gotten out of the more than $100,000 that Reigh Count has won is not in the money but in the satisfaction that we knew a good colt when we bought him for $12,000.

"He may go on and win more than any other horse ever has won before we retire him but we will not love him for that. We love him because he is all horse, a wonderful little fellow, and a smart little fellow."

The Hertz family occupies an entire floor of one of the most fashionable hotels in Chicago and it is lavishly furnished with priceless antiques. But most prominent of all

Affection for Horse

"I almost want to cry when I see that," Mrs. Hertz said. "It is my greatest treasure, but I believe I loved Anita's Futurity cup almost as much. We perhaps have a deeper affection for Anita because she is more bred Anita, you know, and as 'Count' is all horse Anita is every bit a girl."

"I was greatly flattered by the attention given to me after the Derby, but my greatest pleasure came when I went to the barn. 'Count' knew me I know and I think Anita was jealous. But Anita will get her chance later this season. We are going to keep her in her class and not hurt her to make any selfish record for ourselves."

"We have been offered $200,000 for Reigh Count, and goodness knows what we could get if we should offer Anita for sale, but we are going to keep them because they are family jewels."

Mrs. Hertz enthused over the prospect of a race between her Reigh Count and Victorian, Harry Payne Whitney's Preakness and Withers winner.

"I will have to go in training for that race because I was almost a nervous wreck after the Derby. 'Count' went sound asleep an hour after the race but I couldn't sleep for two nights."

"Who do I think will win the race if 'Count' and Victorian are matched? Why, that darling of ours is the greatest little fellow that ever ran on four legs. And Anita, well, she's just beyond words."

Before the active days of Reigh Count and Anita Peabody are over Mrs. Hertz probably will have set a record for total stable earnings and perhaps the great success of the stable will continue after they are through running. For the master of the household says: "That pair ought to produce some nice little fellows for us."

OFFICIAL DAY'S WAGE

MADE $150 IN FRANCE

Paris—(AP)—The official standard of a day's wages, for police court purposes, has been increased to $150. Before the war it was 40 cents.

The smallest fine in France was fixed at a day's pay by law in 1791, long before the present republic was founded, but it still is the rule. As the cost of living has changed, the standard has gone up.

The 40 cents of pre-war days was represented by two gold francs. With the depreciation of money this was changed to five francs in 1921, to 16.25 francs a year later and to 20 francs, or 80 cents, in 1924. The present increase to 37.50 francs almost doubles the former police standard of the average workman's pay.

Indinapolis Man to Carry Burden

Chicago, May 31—(AP)—Johnny Hennessey of Indianapolis may carry most of the burden of the United States' effort to win the American zone Davis Cup tennis finals against Japan on the Chicago town and tennis club courts this week end.

"Big Bill" Tilden, captain of the United States' team, has selected Hennessey to play in the singles with him and had indicated he would pair him with George Lott of Chicago in the doubles.

The winner of the finals this week end will go to Europe early in June to meet the winner of the European zone for the right to challenge France for the Davis cup.

The matches will be played tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday.

Both teams are in Chicago and working hard.

Wisconsin Second in Big Ten Race

Chicago, May 31—(AP)—Through some unexpected aid from Minnesota, its traditional rival, Wisconsin virtually has clinched second place in the Big Ten baseball race.

While the Badgers handed Northwestern its twelfth straight conference defeat at Evanston yesterday, 5 to 4, Minnesota won its first conference game of the season, upsetting Iowa, 2 to 0. The defeat eliminated Iowa from the second place honors as they have lost five out of 11 games. Wisconsin has won seven and lost four and can clinch runner-up honors by winning its last game against Minnesota Saturday.

Only one game was on the conference program today, Ohio State at Chicago. Michigan, the champion, will inaugurate its conference season against Ohio State Saturday. The Wolverines have won 11 straight games.

Oregon Boy's Record Threatened at Meet

Chicago, May 31—Lured principally by the opportunity to qualify for America's Olympic team, several hundred prep stars from villages, towns and cities over the nation were headed toward the University of Chicago's annual interscholastic track and field championship meet today.

The championships, which will be held at Stag Field tomorrow and Saturday, have attracted 800 entries, the largest in the meet's history. Record-breaking performances are anticipated.

The individual point record, established by Sherman Landers of Oregon, Ill., with 26 points in 1916, will be threatened by several versatile athletes this year.

Miller vs Mueller

Chicago, May 31—(AP)—Promoter Jim Mullen's first elimination round to find a suitable opponent for Sammy Mandell and his lightweight crown will be held tonight when Ray Miller of Chicago and Freddie Mueller of Buffalo, N. Y., meet in a ten round bout.

Badgers are Champs

Chicago, May 31—(AP)—Wisconsin's racketeers are the new Big Ten tennis champions.

By taking a dual match from Chicago, 8 to 1, yesterday, the Badgers ended their season with eight straight dual meet victories and no defeats.

Frank E. Tripp, general manager of the Gannett Newspapers, says: "I once knew a man who swore he never could find what he needed in his own home town, so he had to leave the little town for almost everything. It sounded like a good reason and he was honest about it. He really believed it.

"Then came a time when he was laid up and couldn't get away so easily. He needed something that he had been buying on his periodical trips away from home. He went to his little dealer with a sample of what he wanted and asked if it could be ordered for him.

"What size do you want?" asked the modest small-town merchant.

"About a number three, I think," replied the customer.

"That's the size we sell most," replied the merchant as he handed out a box with as large a variety as the customer had ever seen.

"The customer took his merchandise and walked out. He was making his livelihood in that little town. He became a little bit ashamed of himself and he went back to the merchant and made a confession.

"As he was passing out the merchant remarked: 'We have a lot of things in this store which you have been buying out of town. Why don't you give us a chance?'

"Up to this point my sympathies had been with the poor little merchant. But I shifted when my friend rejoined: 'How did I know? I never saw your advertise time. Why don't you give me a chance?'

POSSIBLE "FIRST LADY"

Mrs. William E. Borah

Editor's Note: This is the seventh of a series on prospective "First Ladies," by Allene Sumner, writer for The Evening Telegraph and NEA Service. Today's article deals with Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of the senator from Idaho, who is mentioned as a Republican presidential aspirant.

BY ALLENE SUMNER
Staff Writer for The Evening Telegraph and NEA Service

Washington, D. C. — Revelations have been made in the not so far distant past of toothpicks on the White House table. Little mention has ever been made of a cookie jar in the White House pantry.

But if Senator William E. Borah of Idaho should be our next president, the first and foremost job of the new First Lady would see that a White House cookie crock was well filled with sugary, cinnamon, crunch, raisin-topped cookies into which the president could dip the presidential pay at frequent intervals.

"For," as golden-haired little Mrs. Borah confided, "the senator just can't function without his cookie jar."

Nor would the cookie jar end the First Lady's duties. There's the little matter of onion soup, too. The senator, confides Mrs. Borah, is still searching for the perfect onion soup. He insists that he never gets it at home.

Looks for Recipes

Wherever popular Mrs. Borah goes she is constantly on the lookout for onion soup. She thought she had found it when in Atlantic City a few weeks ago, and interviewed the hotel chef himself for the recipe. She special-delivered the recipe back to her cook in Washington and thought she had earned her wifely laurels.

"But when I got home the senator said it wasn't quite right, either," she moaned. "I don't know what he wants—whether it's more cheese or pepper or what—but it'll be a red star day when he admits his onion soup is made right."

They call the Borahs down in Washington "Big Borah" and "Little Borah." For the possible First Lady wears 14 clothes, child size, shoes and comes just about to the big senator's breast pocket.

They say that "Little Borah" winds him around her little finger but she makes no boasts of her prowess. However, it is noted that the senator still rides the street cars, though he once permitted auto salesmen to take him to lunch. "Little Borah" said he needed his horseback riding and walk from the street car more than an auto.

The Borah apartment blooms like an exotic flower on the top floor of an old-fashioned red brick apartment house. A green and scarlet macaw perches on a fan-backed Chinese chair in which "Little Borah" sits like a dainty bit of Chinese porcelain. Long-legged cranes and herons of porcelain drink from table lily pools. Bits of jade and brass plaques make the fragrant orient live in this little bit of occident.

And myriads of canaries and goldfinches fly about the sunny rooms. "Little Borah" says it's bad enough to take birds from their forest home without cooping them up in cages. Once in a while a fluff of yellow feather settles down to drink from a green porcelain turtle bowl.

They Call Her Mother

And into this haven of jade and brass and brocade and singing birds comes a strange procession of humanity—derelicts, boys and girls who call "Little Borah" "Aunt Mary" and claim her as their nearest relative. For "Little Borah," childless herself, has offered herself as mother to the world's motherless. She never turns a pleader away. The shell-shocked soldier boys of St. Elizabeth's are her special pets. Week after week, her basket filled with fruit and magazines and gay pictures, she takes the street car out to the mental hospital to help "the boys" who live for this weekly visit.

It is no longer popular or the fashion to visit war victims so long after the war, but "Little Borah's" fashions are her own—the fashion of eternal service.

Every morning the postman brings her a sack of mail from the four corners of the country—from mothers and fathers and sisters and sweethearts of other soldier boys "gone west" or missing. Sometimes a grubby dollar bill "for the boy who needs it" is tucked in the letter; sometimes a big box of nuts or vegetables or fruits come from south or west. But for the most part she goes her way alone, working where so many have forgotten.

News of her self-imposed motherhood has so traveled that other boys and girls ring her apartment bell as casually as Alice Longworth, who is a frequent morning caller.

A wild-eyed, wet-faced boy was sitting on her Chinese broadened sofa one day when I was with her, begging her to get his brother out of prison. They came in at all hours of the day or night to be fed and mothered. They call her their "next of kin" when getting jobs, and she never denies it.

One guesses that certain conventional demands of a First Lady would not satisfy "Little Borah," who despises form and ritual and rigamarole and only asks to "get big things done."

"I am just a gypsy," she says. "I hate planning things ahead. I just want to get my hat on and run when I feel like it."

She won't pay official Washington calls.

"I can't answer my letters," she says. She has no social secretary, not even a typewriter. Every morning she sits down with her pile of letters from people she has never seen and writes with pen and ink reassurance and help.

Her father was Governor William McConnell of Idaho, later a U. S. Senator. She met Senator Borah when he was campaigning for her father.

"I liked him because he seemed so big and powerful," she says.

Live Modestly

The Borahs are said to be about the only senatorial family in Washington who live within their salary. They accept few invitations because they feel they have neither the time nor means to entertain. But no couple are so sought by the most important people for "Little and Big Borah" are pronounced delightful because of their unpretension and genuineness.

Meeting Mrs. Borah is like a sun bath, a plunge into something warm and mellow and comforting. One hears the birds singing the minute the door bell is rung. The maid no sooner opens the door than "Little Borah" sings out the name of her expected caller and rushes to the door herself, taking coat and hat and umbrella and galoshes and insisting on the softest chair for the visitor, a cushion at the back, a cup of tea, and "just a good rest before you talk."

The eternal mother. That is Mamie McConnell Borah, but a youthful eternal mother of golden hair, blue eyes, pink cheeks, a debutante's grace and a chic of a Parisian model.

They call "Big Borah" "Lucky Borah," too. There's a reason.

NEXT: Mrs. Edward Everett Gann.

BELGRADE CITY OF DISORDER AS STUDENTS RIOT

Protest Against Convention Became Real Threat

Belgrade, May 31—(AP)—Belgrade passed through a night of terror, and this morning there were many signs of the destruction. Sanginary encounters between police and students opposed to ratification of the Negro Convention, permitting Italy to get a grip on the Dalmatian coast, lasted from 8 o'clock in the evening until daylight today.

Swords, revolvers, bayonets, rifles, clubs, bricks and all sorts of missiles were freely used. Thirty-two students and nine gendarmes were wounded, some of them seriously. Seventeen students were arrested, but liberated when police feared their comrades would attempt to rescue them by violence. Forty-three workmen, who joined the students, were imprisoned. Many mounted police were dragged from their horses by the students and almost trampled to death under the hoofs of the stampeding animals.

Only the toleration and patience shown by the police and government authorities prevented the conflict from developing into open internecine warfare. When the students' ammunition, which consisted mostly of bricks, clubs and bludgeons, with revolvers in the hands of some, became exhausted, enraged youths forcibly entered the Imperial Czar restaurant, where diplomats were accustomed to meet, and, mounting to the second floor, hurled tables, chairs, marble slabs, chandeliers and even the grand piano on the heads of the police.

Fire Hose Effective

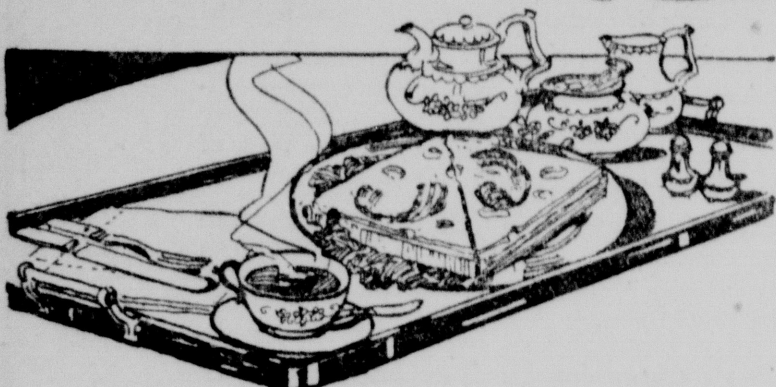

Fearing that the further use of firearms would cause wholesale bloodshed, the police summoned the fire department, which with the aid of ladders ejected the students from the hotel and subdued them by drenching them with water. Every window in the hotel was smashed, the furniture was demolished and the building wrecked. The Italian minister, Signor Bordorero, again visited the foreign office today and cautioned the Yugoslav government that the rioting and demonstrations against Italy must be suppressed at all costs. He warned that Italy will demand full reparation in behalf of all Italians whose lives or properties have suffered.

Political Gossip

Washington, May 31—(AP)—Testimony that the Ku Klux Klan had paid Senator Heflin, Democrat, Alabama, implacable foe of Governor Alfred E. Smith's presidential candidacy, for speeches in various states was given by William Zumburn, general counsel for the organization, today before the Senate presidential campaign committee.

Zumburn testified after Representative Snell of New York had told the committee he knew nothing of Governor Smith's expenditures. He said he understood that Heflin got $250 for speaking in Ohio; $250 for

Delectables for the Tea Table

By CAROLINE B. KING
Culinary Expert and Lecturer on Domestic Science

AFTERNOON tea is always an interesting function, for it is then the hostess may exercise her imagination serving unusual dainties and tid bits to guests who are almost sure to be exceedingly appreciative. Tea in warm weather may be just a courtesy name for some delightful punch or fruitade, or iced tea with fruit and mint sprays for flavor and decoration may be served. But the sandwiches must be plentiful and attractive, and they may be ethereal and substantial at the same time if the ingredients for their making are selected with discrimination.

Switzerland cheese is one of the most amenable of all products for sandwich making. In flavor it is piquant and delicate and it possesses certain important food properties, proteins and vitamins that make it extremely valuable in the dietary.

Sandwiches for the tea table should be invitingly small, the bread may be rye, white or whole wheat, and may be cut in rounds, triangles, squares or fingers.

Deviled Cheese Sandwiches: are served piping hot and make a delightful contrast to a cool salad or a chilled drink. They may be made on the electric grill, if convenient. Cut thin slices of whole wheat or white bread into two inch rounds, spread with butter and arrange wafer-like slices of

The Alabamian was paid by the state Klan organizers, he said, and the national organization had not contributed for those meetings or to any political organizations or candidates.

Zumburn told Chairman Steiwer that the Klan national body had no connection with the work of the state organizations.

"Has the Klan spent any money to call attention to the fact that any of the presidential candidates is of the Catholic faith?" the Oregon

Senator asked.

"Not a cent, so far as the national body is concerned," Zumburn replied.

The Klan attorney told the committee that it could get information about payments to Heflin from these state Klan leaders.

Joe Huffington, Indianapolis; Ralph W. Hoyt, of Des Moines; James W. Colestock, of Columbia; Dr. Amos W. Duncan of Charlotte. If Heflin was paid for his recent speech against Smith at Winston-Salem, N. C., Zumburn said he did not know it. He added, however, that he might have been and that Dr. Duncan could give the facts.

PEKING'S FALL MAY RESULT IN LASTING PEACE

Northern Forces are Withdrawing from Great Wall Now

London, May 31—(AP)—The fall of Peking before the steadily advancing Nationalists today again appeared imminent with the possibility that Chang Tso-Lin, long the Northern dictator will shortly retreat into his stronghold across the Great Wall into Manchuria.

Advices reaching Tokyo indicated that Chang Tso-Lin already has decided to withdraw from Peking and has started some of his troops toward Manchuria.

Although the Northerners were reported in advices from Tientsin to be withdrawing toward the north, they were expected to make a stand at Luliho, a railroad junction about twenty miles southwest of Peking. All communications on the railway from Peking to Tientsin have been suspended.

The Northern headquarters said that the present withdrawal of Northerners was caused by the defection of the Eighth Corps, which refused to fight any longer and retired to the north, making it necessary for the other defending troops to fall back in order to straighten out the Northern front. The defection of the Eighth Corps was laid to false propaganda that Chang Tso-Lin already had left Peking for Manchuria.

Shanghai dispatches said that the mutiny of the Eighth Corps enabled General Feng Yu-Hsiang, Nationalist ally, to pierce the northern center at Hokenfu.

Tokyo, May 31—(AP)—Information reached Japanese military headquarters today that Chang Tso-Lin, northern dictator, had decided to withdraw from Peking. In accordance with this resolve a portion of the Northern troops was proceeding to Mukden, Manchuria.

The Japanese military authorities expected that the Nationalist forces would occupy Peking very soon.

It was believed that this would lead to the restoration of peace in China.

The opinion was expressed in well-informed circles in Tokyo that the southern (Nationalist) troops were not likely to penetrate north beyond the great wall.

Protective measures have already been undertaken and these were considered sufficient for the safety of foreigners.

ORDERS WITHDRAWAL

Peking, May 31—(AP)—Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, northern dictator, today ordered troops on the Peking-Hankow Railroad to fall back to the railroad junction at Luliho. Luliho is about 20 miles southwest of Peking and about 60 miles northeast of Paotingfu, from which city the Nationalists drove the northern troops. Mukdenite (northern) headquarters stated that the fighting against the Nationalists during the last ten days had not been very severe. They said the Northerners were not defeated and their casualties had been 2,500.

BANDITS STAGE BOLD HOLD-UP AT INDIANAPOLIS

$200,000 Loot Taken at Speedway Day Dinner-Dance

Indianapolis, Ind., May 31—(AP)—In one of the most spectacular hold-ups ever staged here, six men late last night held up about 200 guests at the Speedway Day dinner dance at the Broadmoor Country Club just northwest of the city limits and escaped with money, jewelry and other valuables, the total value of which, club officials said, was between $150,000 and $200,000.

Several of the city's most prominent businessmen and department store owners were among the victims. The dinner dance was held in connection with the annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway yesterday and many out of town guests were present. It was said the club members and their guests were wearing much valuable jewelry.

No clue as to the identity of the men was obtained.

Just as the dance was in full progress, four men rushed in the main door and forced A. S. Lubell, club manager, to hold up his hands.

Two men with sawed off shotguns rushed into the ball room and with several companions guarded the entrance and forced all of the dancers and other guests to line up against the wall. The guests were then ordered to toss their jewelry, watches, billfolds and all their pocket money into a large canvas bag. Ernest Fisher, a guest, was struck on the head when he did not comply with the bandit's order quickly enough to suit them.

She was out of his arms in one lightning-quick movement. "Oh, Niel, you're making me forget."

THIS HAS HAPPENED

VIRGINIA BREWSTER, upon the sudden death of her father, goes to live with a friend, CLARRISA DEAN, and her father. Her fiancé, NATHANIEL DANN, objects to this for he mistrusts DEAN's motives. Upon phoning NIEL's studio late one night, VIRGINIA surprises when his model, CHIRI, answers. This causes a quarrel which is later mended.

Hoping to get NIEL away, DEAN arranges to have him offered a position in San Francisco. NIEL begs VIRGINIA to marry him and go west, but she refuses to let him sacrifice his art.

CLARRISA becomes jealous of VIRGINIA, and the latter resolves to leave but DEAN opposes her departure and asks her to marry him. When she refuses, he threatens to reveal the fact that her father cheated him out of $100,000. Reluctantly, VIRGINIA pledges to marry him if she fails to earn the money to repay him in one year's time. She then leaves hotel in which to live, after learning that her bank balance is overdrawn and paying one of her rings. She goes to NIEL's studio for tea and to tell him of her departure from the DEAN'S. Part of her happiness at seeing him is spoiled by the presence of his model, CHIRI, who shows no haste in departing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XX

NATHANIEL'S ardent pleading came to a whispered end. Virginia remained quiet, his cheek touching hers, his heart filled with victory.

Exquisite release from pain, from doubt and haunting fear. She was tired and his embrace was a restful haven, soothing her with a sense of peace and security. They did not count the moments as they passed, the moments of bliss, but one came at last that broke the spell for Virginia. It brought the reckoning of this sweet surrender crashing through the forgetfulness Nathaniel had lulled in her mind.

She was out of his arms in one lightning-quick movement. "Oh, Niel," she cried frantically, "you're making me forget."

Nathaniel gasped.

"Don't touch me, please," she begged tearfully. "You don't understand."

Nathaniel stood back from her, worried and not a little frightened. Had her troubles affected her mind? "Sit down, please," he said with gentle command.

"Oh, Niel," she sobbed, sinking suddenly into her chair. "I love you with all my heart but you mustn't talk about marriage."

He knelt beside her in stricken silence. He was afraid to speak to her lest he arouse her to further irresponsible declarations.

Presently she lifted her head from her arms and put a hand on his. "Your hand's like ice," she exclaimed in surprise.

"Will you talk to me?" he said, ignoring the condition of his hands. "If you will promise not to make love to me as you did."

"My God, Virginia! I'm on fire for you. What kind of man would I be to let you live alone now, when you need someone to comfort you more than you ever will again?"

"You've no idea how much the thought of your love comforts me, Niel, darling. But I've made up my mind not to love myself in happiness until . . . until . . . it's so soon since father's death, you know," she ended haltingly.

"I don't want to throw you into hysterics again," Nathaniel told her "but it seems to me you aren't giving much consideration to my feelings. Aside from that I know your father would not want you to live alone. He'd be the first to advise you to listen to me."

"You must let me be the judge of that, Niel. In spite of the liberty he allowed me, father was a most conventional person. He often said our modern speed was in very bad taste. And to marry in haste . . .

"But Virginia, I just want you to name a day. It needn't be for a few weeks if you insist, but you owe me something. If you loved me as much as I do you, I wouldn't have to urge our wedding."

"You have no right to say that, Niel. No one can understand just how another person feels about things. If you knew . . . if you were in my place . . .

"I wouldn't know so much about love, I'm afraid," Nathaniel put in passionately.

Virginia shrank back from him as if he had struck her.

"If you feel like that . . ." she cried, and leaped to her feet. Nathaniel caught her. "Virginia," he said with instant contrition, "we're perilously near our first quarrel. I'd apologize a thousand times before I'd have that happen. Please, dear, let's kiss and make up."

Virginia could not resist him, but even as their lips met, her mind registered a conviction that this was not to be the end of their hot words. Nathaniel's doubt of her love would grow stronger as time went on and she continued to turn a deaf ear to his pleas. Doubting her, he would lose faith, and if at last he really believed that she did not love him he would not turn away from her? Virginia clung to him fiercely as this thought went through her mind, and for that moment at least Nathaniel did not question the depth of her love. He was a little surprised by the force of her passion but not at all loath to accept it.

"Don't ever say such things again," she entreated him. "Promise you won't doubt me, no matter what I do. Promise, Niel! Promise you'll believe in me until I tell you I don't love you any more!"

Nathaniel laughed happily. He had not Virginia's reasons for knowing the test his faith would be put to and her insistence seemed a trifle dramatic, but he liked to have her this way, palpitating and flushed with emotion.

"You darling!" he cried. "I'll promise anything you like if you'll promise to give me a fair break."

Virginia hesitated. "I'll be fair," she said at last, but there was a change from her fervor of a moment before. She knew that promises made on ignorance were not binding, and Nathaniel must remain in ignorance until their fate was settled. Nathaniel noticed the change but he was not intelligent enough to know that the rupture of a moment gone cannot be recuperated at will. But there would be other moments!

"And now we will have dinner together," he remarked joyously. "Gosh, Virginia, I'm glad to have you to myself. I'd never have seen much of you if you'd remained with the DEANS. Where'll we eat?"

"Let's stay down here in the Village."

"All right. I'll get this point off my hands."

While he was gone Virginia carried the tea tray to the kitchenette and washed the cups and saucers. She had to be moving, doing something. To sit in idleness was tormenting. Already she had formulated a vague plan for the beginning of her struggle with Fortune, but she could do nothing about it until she had some money, even a little money.

Nathaniel hurried and rejoined her soon. He looked tremendously handsome in his slouchy gray tweeds, but Virginia laughed at the way he had brushed his hair. Just like a small boy who thought he'd be late for the circus.

"I'm afraid you will be cold," he said, noticing that Virginia had no wrap. "Shall we taxi up to your hotel and get a coat?"

"You have a Spanish shawl; can't I take that?"

Nathaniel rummaged in the Italian chest under the window and brought up a beautiful black silk shawl with white roses.

"Have to hide it from Chiri," he remarked casually. "A friend sent it from Spain, so I shouldn't like to part with it."

Virginia let him wrap it around her shoulders and drape it artistically.

"See what a handy man around the house I'll be," he boasted.

"I'm not so useless myself," Virginia retorted and gave his hair a few deft touches.

"It's rooted in my stubborn streak," Nathaniel apologized.

"Well, then, rumple it good and really look like an artist," she suggested, and further disarranged the sorrel mop. "Now you look like Will Rogers would look if he had your face," she teased.

She felt as one feels who has reached terra firma after skating on thin ice. If she could keep Nathaniel in a light mood, keep him entertained, make him forget serious matters, it might be possible to lead him gradually into accepting her changed status without thinking he must do something about it. When he saw that she was not so helpless as people thought her—that she could do what other girls were doing and—though he would not know this—much, much more, he would grow to respect her independence, to admire her for refusing to come to him as one who is too weak to weather a storm seeks shelter.

"Any place in particular?" Nathaniel asked.

"Let's stroll. I love these streets. My shawl won't be conspicuous, will it?"

"In the Village! I've seen such things as a girl with stockingless legs on a night in January, hula-walking on Seventh Avenue. She wasn't in costume, either."

"Well, her legs are her own affair, aren't they?" Virginia remarked with hidden glee.

"Of course they are."

Virginia smiled. "That's one of the things I like in you, Niel. You believe, really believe, in freedom. Most people who say they do, just flatter themselves."

"You mean they theorize. I don't suppose anyone would deny he believed in the individual's right to do as he pleases within the laws, written and unwritten, but the application of a theory often puts it in a different light."

"But if you have the real spirit of liberty, you'd always put it first in importance, above your own personal wishes in the matter, wouldn't you?"

"I'd want to do that."

Virginia smiled again and tucked the statement away in her memory for future use.

A little later, when they walked into an orange-painted grotto, she was doubly glad that she had trapped Nathaniel into making it.

COOLIDGE SPEAKS AT GETTYSBURG

President Faces Spot Where Lincoln Stood When Making Immortal Dedictory Address in 1863

Facing the spot where Lincoln delivered his famous Gettysburg address and standing only a short distance away, President Coolidge made a Memorial Day address at Gettysburg National Cemetery.

The Soldiers' National Monument (left) now stands on the spot where stood the rude wooden platform from which Lincoln delivered his immortal oration when the cemetery was dedicated on Nov. 19, 1863. A short distance behind the rostrum chosen for Coolidge's speech is the Lincoln speech memorial (below), often mistaken as designating the spot on which the martyred president stood. The insert shows President Coolidge and the artist's sketch is taken from an old picture of Lincoln delivering his address.

Speaking from a rostrum on the Gettysburg battlefield near the spot where Lincoln delivered his immortal address, President Coolidge yesterday voiced a plea for the abolishment of war as the fittest tribute to the war dead of America.

At the same time he demanded less indifference to crime in the United States and condemned what was described as a tendency of the legislatures to exceed the powers granted to them by the Constitution. These things, he said, tended to weaken the regime of law and breed turbulent populations prone to war.

Although not mentioning any specific legislation, one portion of the President's speech was regarded as a reference to the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill which he recently vetoed. Legislatures, he said, could not evade responsibility for exceeding their constitutional authority by "the weak plea" to let a law be passed and have its validity passed upon by the courts.

Declaring the "one thing we want above all else for ourselves and for other nations is a continuance of peace," Mr. Coolidge reviewed negotiations by the State Department for treaties against war and for arbitration treaties.

The Briand proposal that the United States and France sign a treaty to renounce war was described by the President as having developed into "one of the most impressive peace movements that the world has ever seen."

Secretary Kellogg's submission to the powers of a draft treaty to this effect, "has met with very favorable reception," he said.

"Not only has the idea of a multilateral treaty for the renunciation of war been endorsed by public opinion here and abroad, but the governments themselves have approached the matter with an interest and a sympathy which is most encouraging," he continued.

"It is my earnest hope that success may crown the negotiations now in progress, and that the ideals which have inspired the French Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Secretary of State of the United States in their joint effort to find a solution of the problem of peace may find a practical realization in the early making

Mr. Coolidge said, it was essential that all officers and all executive, judicial and legislative bodies should adhere strictly to the authority with which they have been clothed.

"The chief temptation to go beyond the bounds which the people have set, arises in legislatures," he declared. "In their desire to take some action which they conceive to be in the public interest, they oftentimes manifest a disposition to exceed their constitutional authority. Such action is larceny of power. Responsibility for it cannot be evaded by the weak plea to let the law be passed and the courts can decide its constitutionality."

The same necessity for being law-abiding devolved upon Americans even when they lived abroad, Mr. Coolidge continued.

"When once they have set foot in foreign land, it is their duty to render obedience to the domestic and international law which is applicable to their proposed actions," he said. "Our government necessarily has rights over its citizens and their property in whatever country they may be."

"While we do not and cannot undertake to interfere in the application of domestic law to our nationals, unless it contravenes the rights of our Government and people under international law, nevertheless the carelessness of some of our citizens abroad in violating domestic law and in assuming an arrogant attitude towards the local inhabitants tends to bring our country into disrepute and endangers the continuance of friendly relations."

President Coolidge reviewed in his speech the enormous sums in pensions and gratuities which the American Government has paid to its war veterans. Civil war pensions alone, he said, had amounted to over $6,000,000,000, while the world war compensations have totalled already almost $5,000,000,000, thus showing that the United States indicates its respect for its service men "by something more substantial than lip service."

President Coolidge declared that although greater sums are being spent now than ever before upon the maintenance of an adequate American military establishment, this is "exceedingly moderate" and purely defensive in character.

Doubt Legislature

Can Muster Quorum

Springfield, Ill., May 31.—(AP)—As many members of the legislature as felt so disposed were to return to Springfield today for the second lap of the "home rule" special session of the Illinois General Assembly, in compliance with the call of Governor Len Small.

The session is scheduled for 5 o'clock this afternoon. A program from the session remains a puzzle. Home rule, paramount issue before the special session when it started several weeks ago, is dead. There is doubt whether the gas tax refund law, to pass which the Governor called the legislators back today, can be passed. It is doubtful whether a quorum will be present in the Senate, and still more doubtful whether enough House members will assemble to transact business.

If the gas tax bill ever gets as far as third reading, many predict it will be necessary to send sergeants-at-arms out after absentees in order to muster voting strength.

It now appears that if the gas tax bill is revived, amendments will be offered to refund all of the $6,300,000 to the counties, instead of giving half the fund to the state. A growing sentiment for this amendment was seen as the two houses recessed a week ago.

Chief of Mexican

Staff is Ousted

Mexico City, May 31.—(AP)—General Jose Alvarez, Chief of Staff to President Calles, has been dismissed from that post on charges of having betrayed the president's confidence by smuggling large shipments of silks into Mexico under the protection of Calles' name. The announcement of the General's dismissal, which was made over the signature of the President, created a sensation.

General Alvarez was arrested and lodged in a cell at police headquarters and it was predicted that there will be a greater sensation when the public learns of this. The morning papers withhold news of the arrest.

Calles' announcement said: "To my great surprise and undoubtedly to that of the country, one of the highest state officials and a prominent member of the Army, General Jose Alvarez, chief of my general staff, who enjoyed my friendship and confidence, has betrayed the elementary principles of honor and morality not only by directing the introduction of a large shipment of contraband but also by using my name in telegraphic orders to protect the contraband and to insure himself immunity."

ARTERIAL HARDENING

Hardening of the arteries, or arterial sclerosis, may be divided into several different classes. That which is most talked about is produced by deposits of lime in the walls of the arteries. At first it would seem that this lime deposit is due to eating too many foods that contain this material, but a careful investigation will disclose that this is not the real cause.

It is true that the use of too many cereals is one of the principal causes of hardening of the arteries. This is not because of the presence of lime in the cereals, but because of the fact that an excessive amount of starch found in the cereals leads to fermentation in the stomach and intestines, which produces acidosis. The toxins from this condition pass through the delicately lined arteries causing them to tense, and in time the arteries form a coating (an alkali) to neutralize the effect of the irritating acidosis.

Excess fermentation of food is undoubtedly the principal cause of this disorder. If this fermentation continues day after day, the vicious irritation of the walls of the arteries causes them to become thickened and calcified, often to such an extent as to interfere with the flow of the blood. In the early stages of hardening of the arteries, there is no lime present, but the condition is recognized by a thickening of the arterial walls. Any deposit of irritating materials in the blood is apt to result in this disease. Those who overeat, excessively use alcohol, those afflicted with gout, kidney disease, syphilis, or those who habitually consume wrong combinations of food, are most susceptible to this disease.

Valvular heart disease is often caused by the same type of irritant which produces a thickening and hardening of the valves, interfering with their action.

Other diseases are sometimes brought on by this type of arterial weakening. Sometimes aneurism or dilatation of the artery will result because of the strain from pulse pressure. Occasionally an embolus is formed which is carried by the blood until it becomes lodged in a smaller vessel where it clogs the circulation and may result in a stroke of apoplexy or gangrene.

The arteries leading into the legs sometimes become so calcified that they can be seen through the X-ray just like thin bones.

The hardening deposits of the arteries can be softened by following a rigid dietetic regime over a long period of time. The arteries will probably not entirely return to their normal tone in advanced cases, but even so, the patient can usually lessen his arterial tension and prolong his life.

The greatest caution must be used to avoid inharmonious food combinations or the things which I have outlined as producing a toxicosis. Patients who are careful will continue to improve over a period of many years, but they must learn their food combinations.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: K. L. writes: "I am much overweight and would like you to publish a list of rations that are not fattening. Are lima beans fattening? Have already quit eating bread, butter, potatoes and gravy."

ANSWER: You can slowly reduce your weight through following the weekly menus which are published in this column. To reduce more rapidly, eliminate the meals containing the starchy food and substitute a fruit meal. You will notice that I recommend the starch to be used at noon, so a simple rule for you to follow is to use the breakfasts and dinners as I suggest, but take one kind of fruit at noon, using as much of the kind as you desire.

QUESTION: Mary asks: "May plums be used in combination with other foods?"

ANSWER: Plums are a good acid fruit but should be used by themselves. In season they make a good noonday lunch.

QUESTION: N. V. writes: "Are diseased or weak kidneys?"

ANSWER: Eggs good for a person suffering from kidney trouble of any kind should be able to handle a limited number of eggs, about one a day, properly prepared by cooking or poaching.

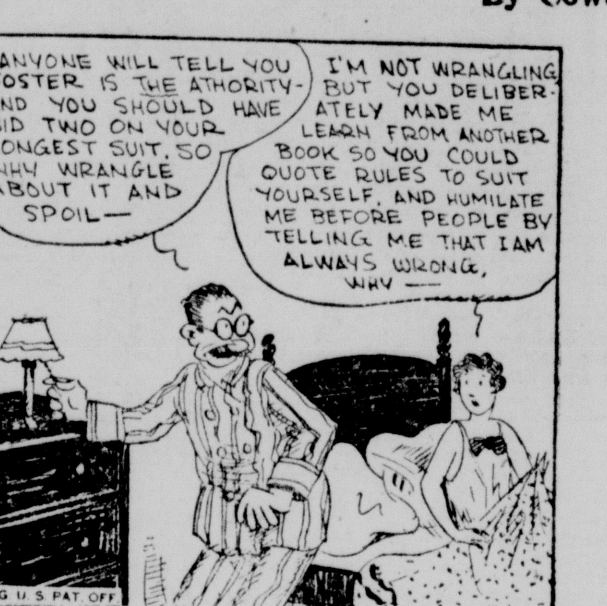

QUESTION: Mother writes: "I have a year and a half old baby who has constant colds. I have had him on a general baby diet under the care of a child specialist. What kind of diet would you advise?"

ANSWER: It is apparent that your child is not on the right diet or he would not be having constant colds. Stop using all milk modifiers and give your baby nothing but pure certified Holstein cow's milk with the addition of one or two teaspoonsful of orange juice before each feeding. Your baby, at his age, should use about eight ounces at a feeding, taking this quantity at four hour periods, making only four times daily.

Mine Owner Beaten

Petersburg, Ind., May 29.—(AP)—William Johnson of Indianapolis, superintendent of the Gibson Coal Company and president of several mines in West Virginia and in Indiana, was severely beaten today by a number of miners who attempted to prevent him from opening Little's mine, a deep vein shaft six miles southwest of here.

Today Johnson bought eighteen miners from the Vincennes coal fields planning to open the mine under the 1917 wage scale which calls for a minimum of $5 per day.

More than 400 miners from Pike and Gibson counties had gathered at the shaft to prevent operation of the mine under any scale less than provided in the Jacksonville agreement.

NOVICE WON BIG RACE YESTERDAY; CROWD IS RECORD

23-Year-Old California Lad Takes Indianapolis Classic

BY CHARLES W. DUNKLEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
Indianapolis, May 31—(AP)—Jumping from obscurity to fame overnight, Louis Meyer, boyish-looking Los Angeles youth, today found himself acclaimed the newest hero of the automobile racing world.

This 23-year-old driver thrilled a crowd of more than 140,000 spectators by coming from behind in the last 30 miles of the race to win the 500-mile classic at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway yesterday. He piloted his car to victory in the most dramatic finish ever enacted in the classic. He rode the entire distance without refueling and made only one stop. His time was 5:01:33.75, an average of 99.482 miles an hour.

Meyer today gave credit for his driving skill to Frank Elliott, a famous racing star of other years.

Credit to Veteran
"Elliott taught me all I know about race driving," Meyer said. "You know I worked for him for two years as a mechanic. Boy, I'm happy."

"I thought I would win after 160 laps. I had worked pretty well into the race then, although I had only faint hopes of overtaking Jimmy Gleason and Tony Gullotta. I just sat tight and let the old wagon buzz along, and hoped for the best."

Meyer's victory was achieved after only sixty laps of previous racing experience on the Indianapolis course.
He relieved Wilbur Shaw in the race
last year for that length of time.

Meyer found himself $35,000 richer today as a result of his victory. "You were extremely happy to get his fists on that roll of money, for it was only just a week ago that he had managed to scrape up enough money to enable him to buy the car in which he rode to triumph."

Attendance Record
Officials of the speedway said that yesterday's attendance broke all records despite the fact that the day dawned gloomy and the break of dawn was followed by a downpour of rain. The rain threatened again in the closing miles of the race but only a few drops fell and after the drivers slowed down to avoid accidents, they stepped on the gas again to finish in their terrifying dash of speed.

Only four of the 29 drivers shared in the lap prizes which were offered to the driver leading the field in each of the first 144 laps. Jimmy Gleason, the revised records showed today,
captured the lion's share of the prizes, winning $6,700 for having led in 37 laps. Leon Duray led the race for the first 53 laps and later by five additional laps and took $5,800. The sum of $1,900 went to Babe Stapp and $500 to Tony Gullotta.

George Souders, the one-time Purdue University student, winner of the race a year ago gave Meyer a dangerous challenge and was a close up third yesterday. Louis Moore's car finishing second. Moore's tiny racer with Louis Schneider at the wheel as a relief driver was 21-2 miles behind Meyer at the finish, with Souders about 5 miles behind.

15 Cars Finished
Ray Keech of Philadelphia, holder of the world's straightaway record for a mile was fourth with Norman Batten fifth. Fifteen of the original 29
cars finished.

There were few accidents to mar
the race, and those were of a minor character. Three times speeding cars crashed into the retaining walls of curves, but each time the drivers

Watching the Big Scoreboard

(BY THE AP)
Twelve major league teams were on edge today for get-away skirmishes to clear the decks for the season's second siege of intersectional warfare, scheduled to begin at some points along the baseball front as early as tomorrow. The Reds and the Cubs already were on their way east, while the Giants and the Robbins lay idle, awaiting a brief resumption of their intra-city strife at the Polo Grounds today.

Six teams won twice yesterday.
The Reds nicked the Cubs twice only by showing the greatest competitive spirit. There was a 6 to 0 victory over Charlie Root in the morning behind the fine pitching of the veteran Eppa Jephtha Rixey. In the afternoon Ford's single in the tenth provided the winning margin in a 2 to 1 victory and sent the Reds east with a lead of three full games.

The crippled Pirates sagged lower into the second division after the Cardinals scored victories, 10 to 1, and 4 to 3.

The Boston Braves walloped the Phillies 5 to 3 and 11 to 5. Hornsby had two homers. One clinched the first game in the tenth inning, and the other sent the Braves away to a start of three runs in the second encounter.

The Giants rolled the Robins over by 9 to 1 in the morning. The score was tied at 2 to 2 in the afternoon when it rained.

Washington defeated the Yankees
5 to 0. Bobby Reeves made a home run in the sixth after Rice had singled. In the afternoon the Yanks started to make amends by pounding Horace Lisenbee for seven runs in less than two innings, but rain ended the contest.

By defeating the Red Sox, 8 to 1 and 9 to 2, the Athletics gained one and one-half games on the Yankees, but remained seven games to the rear.

Detroit cleaned up two games on the faltering Indians, the afternoon engagement in twelve innings. The scores were 4 to 3 and 6 to 5.

The Browns won both ends of an afternoon double-header for the Chicago White Sox, 3 to 1 and 5 to 2.
The veteran Red Faber pitched a good game in the opener, but lost to Ogden.

THE TREE OF CHEER

The Chinese consider the fir a symbol of longevity. In northern Europe it stands for peace and good cheer and is consecrated to the Christ Child, for this reason taking a prominent part in the Christmas festivities.

Perhaps the best loved fir in the United States is the white or balsam fir which grows in the Rocky Mountains and coast ranges at high elevations. It is beautiful with bluishgreen foliage and a silvery under-surface. The camper loves to make his bed of the elastic, fragrant balsam baughs, and its needles make the prized "balsam" pillows which retain their fragrance for years.

The most important commercial species of white fir grows from Colorado west to Oregon and California, south to New Mexico and Arizona.
The wood is extensively used for butter-tubs and packing boxes and supplies a considerable amount of lumber used locally. The bark is dotted with little blisters or reservoirs filled with resin. These are drained and furnish the market with "Canada balsam."

This species of white fir is sometimes known as silver fir, deriving the name from the color of the under side of its foliage and from the gray bark of its branches. It is also known as California white fir, white balsam, Colorado white fir and balsam tree.
